THE IRON MARKET.

A Condition of Semi-Buoyaney—Contracts for Months Ahead.

New York Bolletin of Sturday.

Present condition, as well as prospects for near future, seem to be even more promising than was anticipated a few months ago, and despite the fact that the customary midsummer dullness is now at hand, there is every appearance of a semi-buoyaney hroughout the market for finiship with the Hyde brothers, whose immense property has for so many years been a bone of contention between the rightful heirs and the British Crown. The Lerd High Chancellor of England rendered a decision this year in reference to the Hyde estate, that it is the nature of personal property and not real estate, and hence properly falls to the descendants in stead of reverting to the Crown. Ex-Gov. Arny has turned up twenty-five heirs besides himself, and instead of triving to limit the number by maintaining a good deal of secrecy about the matter, announces that he will endeavor to secure an caulal division among all descendants are caulal division among all descendants and the prices and caulal division among all descendants are the rightful heirs and the British Crown.

The Lord High Chancellor of England rendered a decision this year in reference to the Hyde estate, that it is the nature of personal property and not real estate, and hence properly falls to the descendants instead of reverting to the Crown. Ex-Gov. Arny has turned up twenty-five heirs besides himself, and instead of trying to limit the number by maintaining a good deal of secrecy about the matter, announces that he will endeavor to secure an equal division among all descendants who come forward and clearly prove their titles. The value of this prospective windfall is a trific of $15,000,000 the accumulation of scores of years of interest and judicious investment by the Bank of England. What little is known of the original amount and its history is embraced in the brief statement that Thomas, John and Humphrey Hyde, great-great uncles of the ex-Governor, made fortunes as East India merchants, deposited them in the Bank of England, and died. By some means or other all clew to the bonanza was lost, but was recovered a number of years ago, when Chancellor Walworth undertook to trace the genealogy of the Hyde family, and brought out as the results of his labors two large volumes of 1,900 pages. The descendants were found to be scattered all put supplies in this market.

The market, so far as concerns ordinary merchant bar and sheet, is somewhat under the settled. The iron Manufacturer's Association at a recent meeting issued a new list quoting prices 1-10 to 15c above what have been current figures for some time past. No combination was formed, how ever, nor any penalty fixed for cutting under the card rate, so that in reality the demand is purely nominal. Indeed, business was effected to-day at 1.75c for common and 1.9c for refued merchant bar 1x$\frac{7}{2}$ to 6x1 flat, and some local dealers do not seem to think that the new list figures can be realized so long as Pennsylvania mills have agents here selling store lots at a very little shade over mill prices.

Sr. Louis, June 28.—Preparations for changing the grade of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway, which have been in progress for two months past, culminated last night, and at daylight this morning over three thousand men commenced work lifting the rails, and long before night the entire line of nearly seven hundred miles, from St. Louis to Texarkana, was changed from 5 feet to 4 feet $\frac{3}{2}$ inches. The locomotives and cars also have been changed, and traffic under the new order of things will proceed without checkor hindrance. The road will connect with the Union Depot of this city tomorrow, and thereafter with all passenger trains for southern points on both sides of the Mississippi river. This line will start from that great centre.

Cincinnat. Part of the evidence which ex-Gov. Ar-Part of the evidence which ex-Gov. Arny has to support his claim is the old family Bible, which is nearly 100 years old, and contains the original record of the marriage of Elizabeth Hyde with Joseph Arny, as well as the entry of the dates of the births of the children of that marriage, the ex-Governor being the eldest son. He speaks as confidently of the result of his mission to England as if he already held his shage in the palm of his hand. Everybody who has known him wishes him success in his efforts to secure the treasure.

President Lincoln appointed him Governor of New Mexico, to fill kit Carson's place, in the early years of the Rebellion, and General Grant reappointed him when he was elected President. He is a farmer, winer, geologist and antiquarian, and is deeply interested in the welfare of the Territory which he has made his home for many years. Whenever he makes a trip to the East he brings with him a rare collection of mineral and vegetable curiosities of New Mexico. On his trip he added to his list, and, opening his valies, he exhibited a horned frog, which has been in his 'possession for six months; has been fed liberally on nothing but air and water, and is as lively as the specimen which Mark Twain has immortalized. A drop of water was placed on his tail and it started him on a quick pace up the leg of the chair, near which he had been dozing in the petrified shell of an oyster which the ex-Governor hadpicked up at the top of one of the Rocky mountian peaks. "That animal is going to England with me," said the ex-Governor hadpicked up at the top of one of the Rocky mountian peaks. "That animal is going to England with me," said the ex-Governor picking him up and placing him in his valise beside an implacing him in his valise beside an impace bowie-knife. The bowie-knife, when opened, displayed a blade the inches in length, and is what is known as a "ive pound bowie." It weighs but a few ounces less than five pounds. It is destined for the Smithsonian Institute and has a history. When Nicaragua Walker, "the'gray-eyed,man of destiny," was student at Bettany Colley, Virginia, ex-Governor Arny was Secretary of the Board of Trustees. His hen-roots was robbed by Walker and 'several chums one night, and they used this knife, which belonged to Walker, in chopping off the Chickens' heads. "Walker forgot to take it when they left the scene of slaughter, and it was found by the Secretary, who has ever since preserved it. Walker was afterward convicted of the theft, and was expelled from the col which John Brown carried in the turbu-jent days of 1855 in Kansas.

Among his mineral curiosities are speci-mens of sulphurets of silver, gold, copper, lead and iron, strips of mica as large and as clear as ordinary panes of window glass, pertrified shells, amolia or native washing sonp, from which, he explained facetiously, can be made a lather that will raise the hair on the baldest head. THE WOOL HARKET.

The Sharp Edge off - Sales Last Week in New York Bulletia of Saturday.

Less urgent necessities to secure stock among consumers, the gradual outcoming of the new Western clips and the very posetive evidence that the extreme prices in many cases have been the result of useless competition still remain as influences tending to hold demand in check. Bayers are by no means difficult to find, and an attactive showing of samples will draw attention and bids, but negotiations are much closer and holders commence to compete for desirable customers. The result is that this week's market has had a comparatively duil tone, and the sharp eige is off on nearly all grades with those holders who cling to extreme view doing the least business. The competition in the country is less general, and every mail brings letters asking for hids on parcels seeking a market.
